Africa Region

Côte d'Ivoire - Ivory Coast

From the mid-1800's, Côte d'Ivoire (Ivory Coast) was under French colonial rule, as a protectorate. However, in 1960, it became an independent nation, retaining close ties to France. French is the primary language of the nation, although there are some 60 ethnic languages spoken here. Islam and Christianity are the two leading religions practiced here, though many traditional African religions contribute to one of the most significant religious challenges: syncretism, which is the blending of religious belief systems or incorporation of other beliefs into an existing religious tradition. In 1987, the Church of the Nazarene established work, bringing the transformative message of Scriptural Holiness to the region. Today, the work of the church in the Francophone (French-speaking) countries of Africa is some of the fastest-growing work in the Africa Region. It is estimated that 60% of the population of Côte d'Ivoire is under the age of 25 years.

A Journey of Compassion: The Trevecca Nashville Students' Mission in Ivory Coast

In mid-May 2024, a group of students from Trevecca Nazarene University arrived in the Ivory Coast, eager to make a difference. Their mission began in the vibrant district of South Ivory Coast, where they painted a local community center, bonding with residents through laughter and shared stories. The fresh paint symbolized hope and collaboration.

On May 12, the students participated in a vibrant worship service that transcended language barriers and engaged with children in Sunday school, igniting their passion for teaching. The following day at a Nazarene clinic, they witnessed the dedication of healthcare workers and the resilience of patients, deepening their understanding of compassion.

Midweek, they organized a football game for street children, emphasizing the joy of togetherness over competition. On May 17, they traveled to Andokoi, where they interacted with the local community, shared stories, and enjoyed a praise concert that united hearts in celebration.

As their journey neared its end, the students prepared for a significant food distribution at a local prison on May 19, delivering 1,000 meals and witnessing the inmates' gratitude—a profoundly emotional experience.

Reflecting on their transformative week, the students returned to Nashville, not just as learners, but as ambassadors of compassion, embodying the power of connection, service, and hope. Their journey reminded them that love knows no boundaries, promoting understanding and unity in a divided world.
